

【Invited Talk】

The impact of IRT model violations in large-scale assessments

Margaret Wu

In international comparative studies, many assumptions of IRT models are violated because the countries participating in the studies have different curricula, language and culture. These model violations can lead to erroneous results. This talk examines some of these model violations and their effects on country mean scores.